understand that Hinduism has no founder and no single holy book. Hindus call their religion, in Sanskrit, Sanaatan Dharm, which means The Eternal Religion. Hinduism accepts other religions as equally valid ways to the Truth.

However, I fully, completely, unequivocally, 100% reject, and refuse to practice or teach any cruel or violent laws from any religion. I believe these laws are not applicable, not relevant, and should not be practiced in any form in today's world by anyone.

OPTIONAL DECLARATION BY A HINDU

Some books in Hinduism have supported cruel laws against some sections of society (i.e., Manu's Laws of the Caste System, also stating the inferiority of women).

I fully, completely, unequivocally, 100% reject, and refuse to practice or teach any cruel or violent laws. I believe these laws are not applicable, not relevant, and should not be practiced in any form in today's world by anyone.

I accept the highest virtue of Ahimsa (not to injure, compassion) and embrace the spiritual vision achieved through the four Yogas of Karma (Action) , Bhakti (Love), Jnana (Knowledge, Reason) and Raja Yoga (Meditation), as expounded by Lord Krishna in the Bhagavad Gita.
